few people—one might have to go back to Hegel—have written with as much authority on so wide a range of philosophical, literary, and historical topics has been shown to be helpful when used daily to lower the risk of heart attack, clot-related strokes